Dear Sir/Madam,

Economics Study Centre is seeking sponsorship from your organization for the upcoming 5th Bangladesh Economics Summit (BES) 2024, scheduled to take place from February 15th-17th, 2024. As the premier event in economics and political economy, BES gathers students nationwide to delve into discussions under the theme "4IR: Navigating the Challenges and Opportunities of the New Industrial Revolution."

Financial support from the sponsor's Organization will contribute to covering essential expenses, including venue arrangements, technology infrastructure, promotional materials, and competition prizes for these segments. We are eager to discuss this sponsorship opportunity further and explore how your Organization can play a crucial role in fostering the growth of young economists and the advancement of education through the 5th Bangladesh Economics Summit.

We, therefore, hope you would consider the matter of assisting us in our endeavor to continue the activities; which have fueled the advancement of economic discourse in our nation. Sovereign Credit Rating

What is sovereign credit rating?
A sovereign credit rating is an independent evaluation of a sovereign entity's credit risk to ascertain its capacity to repay debts.

Factors in determining the rating
To determine a nation's sovereign credit rating, credit rating agencies utilize both qualitative and quantitative methods, such as:

- Per Capita Income
- GDP Growth
- Political Stability
- External Debt
- Economic Development
- History of Default

MOODY'S
Fitch Ratings
STANDARD & POOR'S

Credit rating agencies
The three influential credit rating agencies include Moody's, Fitch Ratings, and Standard & Poor's.

Implications it has on a country's economy
A nation with a high sovereign credit rating can easily access funding from the global bond market and attract Foreign Direct Investment (FDI). A country with a low sovereign credit rating is at a high risk of default and may have trouble repaying its debts.
